Q: Add property to object at runtime How can I add a property to an object at runtime? For example, this doesn't work: `$newObject = new Object(); $newObject->property = 'value';` The property is not visible to following code: `var_dump($newObject->property); //NULL` A: Since you're looking for a way to add properties dynamically, you can create an associative array and then use `array_merge()` to add the properties of the second array into the first. `$newObject = new Object(); $newObject->property = 'value'; $prop = array_merge(array("bar"), $newObject); var_dump($prop); //object(stdClass)#1 (1) { ["bar"]=> string(4) "foobar" }` This was my first time speaking with James Asher (AKA BRUCE DIXON, behind The Age of Arcade! on YouTube) and one of my favorite people working in the gaming space. Our Opinions By March 10, 2000 WASHINGTON—President Clinton proposed extending the Violence Against Women Act for five years and removing language that opposes abortion from the $2.8 billion spending measure, a move that met with bipartisan approval in the Senate, at least for now. The House had already voted to extend the law for two years when it was expiring Sept. 30. But the president's proposal, reported in the Washington Post, would extend the five-year measure until Sept. 30, 2004. The Senate passed the measure shortly before 10 p.m., with most lawmakers and a few key lawmakers who are abortion opponents bowing to the president's wishes. The House passed the bill on a party-line vote of 380 to 32. [September 30, 2001] After meeting for more than three hours, House and Senate negotiators reached an agreement. The compromise doesn't agree to include the Senate abortion language, which was added during the Judiciary Committee process. The deal also drops a spending provision for the government's anti-terrorism program from the bill.
